Why Sales Tax Matters to Cities

SMFRD

June 16, 2025

Sales and use tax has long been the primary source of revenue for Colorado municipalities.

Sales and use taxes have long been the primary source of general-purpose revenue for Colorado municipalities, including the Cities of Centennial and Lone Tree. On average, across Colorado, sales/use taxes account for three-quarters of municipalities' tax income.

Centennial: 59% of total revenues collected.

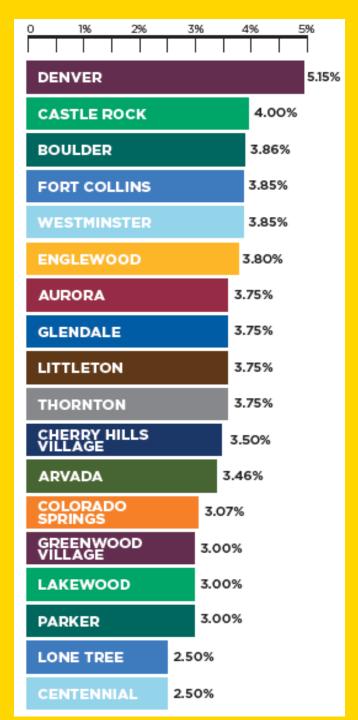

Lone Tree: 66% of total revenues collected.

Sales Tax

What is Centennial's sales tax rate? 2.5%

6.75% Combined

- 2.5% City of Centennial
- 2.9% State of Colorado
- 1.0% RTD
- 0.1% Scientific and Cultural Facilities
   District
- 0.25% Arapahoe County Open Space

Lone Tree Revenue Types

- $0 Property Tax

Impact on Municipalities

The Colorado Municipal League (CML) raised concerns when SB24-194 was introduced that this authorization for fire and ambulance special districts to unilaterally impose sales tax would increase competition for limited sales tax revenue and potentially disrupt the tax bases of municipalities.

Impact on Municipalities

Other municipal concerns when other entities impose a sales tax:

- Create confusion for taxpayers about what their tax dollars are funding.
- Residents may struggle to differentiate between municipal services and those provided by special districts, leading to misunderstandings and reduced accountability.
- Overlap can complicate messaging around fiscal priorities and erode public trust in local government budgeting.

Impact on Municipalities

- Lone Tree welcomes 30 million visitors a year, and therefore has focused on sales tax, because those visitors drive many of our costs, but fewer for fire and medical services, which are primarily residents and businesses that pay property taxes.

Other Considerations

- Sales tax administration is very burdensome. Licensing, auditing, collection, etc. It's also much more volatile and difficult to forecast.
- The retail environment is very competitive. If sales tax gets too high and shoppers move elsewhere, it could distress our retail environment and potentially lower property values and property tax revenues.

SUMMARY

Cities in Colorado object to emergency service districts imposing sales taxes primarily because:

- It threatens the clarity, stability, and sustainability of municipal revenue systems.
- Sales tax is a critical funding source for municipalities and introducing additional taxing entities can lead to taxpayer confusion, administrative burdens, and diluted revenue streams.
